

This month's newsletter offers insight into a very relevant topic, the appraised value of a home.

What Is Appraised Value?

It's an objective opinion of value, but it's not an exact science so appraisals may differ.

For buying and selling purposes, appraisals are usually based on market value—what the property could probably be sold for. Other types of value include insurance value, replacement value, and assessed value for property tax purposes.

Appraised value is not a constant number. Changes in market conditions can dramatically alter appraised value.

Appraised value doesn't consider special considerations, like the need to sell rapidly.

Lenders usually use either the appraised value or the sale price, whichever is less, to determine the amount of the mortgage they will offer.

Used with permission from Kim Daugherty, Real Estate Checklists and Systems

Please contact me at TThomsen@RealtyExecutives.com to receive a current market analysis on your home.

	Tonya Thomsen	Realty Executives Integrity
	Phone: (262)901-0866 Fax: (262)783-4885 tthomsen@realtyexecutives.com BuyAndSellWithTonya.com	13005 W. Bluemound Rd. Brookfield, WI 53005
		 www.REIntegrity.com

Information deemed reliable however, not guaranteed